Project Overview: By the later 1990s, the many layers of 19th and 20th century paint on the Meeting House were causing damage to the internal structure and to the siding. Architect John Dodd advised stripping the paint from the building and returning the Meeting House to its original unstained, unpainted 18th century exterior. Work began in 1998. A number of factors caused delays, and work proceeded slowly. Meanwhile, the painted exterior of the Annex began to flake and the roof of the Meeting House needed attention. A grant from the Morris County Historic Preservation Trust Fund in 2006 provided the necessary funds to finish stripping and treating the Meeting House; stripping and staining the Annex; and cleaning, repairing and preserving the cedar shake roof.

Meeting House and Annex as they appeared in 1990.

Ongoing problems with flaking paint led to the decision in 2005 to raise funds to strip and stain the Annex.

Stripping and treatment began on the front (South) wall in 1998. Layers of paint were hand stripped; siding was repaired and sanded, then treated with mildewcide and preservative.

Contractor Paul Basile discusses shutter restoration with Association members.

Restoration of the cedar shake roof completed work on the Meeting House. Missing and broken shakes were replaced and then treated with mildewcide and preservative; gutters were repaired and replaced.

With the Annex stripped, it was ready for the application of a stain to complete the project. The stain was chosen to complement the Meeting House yet be appropriate to a 20th century building.
